Visas are not granted for holiday journeys, and intending travellers are required to produce evidence of urgent business or other reasons before an application for a visa can be entertained.

In addition to these restrictions the German authorities are taking steps to expel foreigners who are unable to prove a sufficiently valid reason for remaining in Germany. British Subjects employed in Germany as Representatives of British firms should be provided with proper credentials supported by the Local Chamber of Commerce stating definitely that they are accredited Agents or Representatives whose presence in Germany is essential for the conduct of their firm's business. If this is not done, His Majesty's Representatives in Germany cannot intervene on their behalf should the German authorities request them to leave the country."
